Trust Sale.

BY virtue and in pursuance of a Deed of Trust to us executed by Dr. Wm. H Maffitt, dated 3d March, 1827, and registered in the Register's Office of the County of Cumberland, we shall, upon the 4th day of May next, at the Town House in Fayetteville, proceed to sell the interest which the said William H. Maffitt had, and which is, for certain purposes, to us conveyed, in the following Property, to wit—

The Life Estate of the said William in that parcel or tract of land known as the Beaver Creek MILLS, situate about 5 miles from Town, and containing 2300 acres.

Also, his life estate in another Tract, of 179 acres, adjoining the above, with the privilege of cutting Saw Mill Timber on three other tracts, also adjoining, for and during the natural life of the said William.

Also, his life estate in a Tract or parcel of Land, containing 187¼ acres, being that tract of land upon which the said William now lives.

Also, the like interest in two other Lots adjoining the last mentioned, the one containing 120¾, the other 54½ acres, known by the name of Williams's tract.

Also, his life estate in three Tenements, or Stores, on the north side of Hay Street, now in the occupation of C. & P. Mallett, Joseph Arey, and C. P. & S. W. Tillinghast, subject, however, to an unexpired lease in the aforesaid tenements, for the term of one year, from the 1st day of Sept'r, 1826.

Also, his interest, being an absolute estate, in a Negro Man named DUBLIN, about 30 years of age; one Wagon and Team, and all the stock and Farming Utensils, on the Sand Hill Plantation, which are too numerous to particularize.

Presentation of the Standard of the Regiment of Col. WILLIAM WASHINGTON, to the Washington Light Infantry.

This highly impressive and interesting ceremony took place on Wednesday afternoon agreeably to the public notification in the papers. A very large concourse of spectators assembled to behold it. At the hour of five, the Washington Light Infantry escorted by the United Blues, and the Jackson Guards, paraded in front of the residence of Mrs. Washington, who in a very affecting manner, delivered to Col. Cross, the Standard which belonged to the Regiment of her distinguished husband, the late Col. William Washington, during the Revolutionary war. The Standard is in a state of perfect preservation, and looks as freshly and brightly as when it waved in triumph at Guilford and Eutaw. It consists of a plain crimson damask sattin, surmounted by an Eagle. The followng is the address delivered on the occasion by Mrs. Washington:—

COLONEL: Permit me tooffer to you for the service of the Washington Light Infantry, this banner which has been unfurled on the field of battle on some memorable occasions, particularly at Eutaw. Forty years and more have rolled away since it floated on the field of battle for the last time. During that period no hostile foot has dared to pollute the soil in this section of our beloved country. Long may we enjoy the blessings of peace—but should the storm of war arise, I trust that the associations connected with this banner, will heighten the flame of patriotism in the breasts of those over whose heads it is now destined to wave. In committing it to the care of the Washington Light Infantry, I feel assured that I place it under the guardianship of a band of citizen soldiers, who, on no occasion, will suffer its purity or lustre to be tarnished. I pray you, therefore, to accept it in their behalf, and permit me to tender you and them my best respects.

To which Col. Cross replied in the following terms:

To be selected as the bearers and defenders of a Standard under which your distinguished husband fought and conquered in the war of the Revolution, is an honor, Madam, of which my young friends may be justly proud. The associations which attend this interesting relic, are delightful to the soul of the Patriot Soldier, and the day of battle will stimulate the Corps which bears the sacred name of Washington, to deeds of the most chivalrous enterprize.

Permit me, Madam, in behalf of this company, to tender you their sincere thanks for the confidence you have reposed in their courage and discipline, and to assure you and their country, that this standard, which has never waved, but in the breeze of Liberty, shall be preserved, unsullied, by this gallant corps, as a proud memorial of a virtuous, brave and generous soldier.

FELLOW SOLDIERS,
Of the Washington Light Infantry.

This is a day of rejoicing to your corps; the honor of bearing the Standard of Col. Washington, is now yours, and should it be your fortune to unfurl it in presence of an enemy, you will maintain, untarnished, the brilliant reputation with which it is hallowed.—You will remember that under this Banner your countrymen rallied; that before it, Tarleton fled. You will remember that the American Eagle which now hovers over it, has been selected by yourselves, as the palladium of the honor of your corps.

Captain GILCHRIST,

You have heard the pledge which I have given, in the name of your company. Never was promise made with greater confidence, that in the hour of trial, this Standard will be nobly sustained by the stout hearts and strong arms of your soldiers, and by the zeal and science, the courage and high honorable feeling of yourself and Brother Officers.

To which Captain Gilchrist replied as follows:

I accept with gratitude, Sir, the distinguished honor now conferred on my Company. To preserve unsullied the purity of this banner, will be at once our pride and our duty. In our hands its glories shall never be tarnished; and when unfurled on the battle field, we promise to redeem the pledge which you have made.

Cold indeed must be that heart which is not warmed by the associations connected with this sacred relic. The patriot Soldier, as his eye rests on its crimson field, will recollect with a glow of enthusiasm, the gallant deeds of the hero whose name is identified with the history of his country. These brilliant recollections will infuse a new spirit into his soul, rouse his latent energies, and nerve his arm when it strikes in defence of Liberty.

To us, Sir, they will be powerful incentives to action; and in the hour of danger, will lead us to rally around the Standard which so proudly waved in the war of our Revolution.

North Carolina—In looking over some papers, we found a letter addressed to us signed an "Old Guilford soldier," grievously complaining of a want of public spirit in North Carolina to improve the naturally great advantages of that state, whereby many were driven to the "West and setting sun."

This has been lamentably the case in our own state. Maryland, with the exception of a few districts, has declined in population and wealth. But something of a better spirit begins to prevail. We begin to see that we must exert ourselves or sink. We have highly gifted men, and means to do much good for ourselves. The great mistake, however, that we have made, and which has mainly caused our misfortunes, except because of our slave population which eats up all its own product,) still extensively prevails. We "call upon Hercules" instead of putting our own shoulders to the wheel we look to foreign trade and foreign support, instead of home trade and home population. We wait for prosperity to come to us, instead of inviting or seeking it. But we are getting alive to the making of roads, digging of canals and establishing manufactories, to employ our people and make their labour profitable, by the easy exchange of commodities. North Carolina may do the same. Her fine western country has no superior in the quality of its soil or kindness of climate, and when its beautiful hills are covered with sheep, there will be population and wealth and public spirit in the vallies, and the sea-board, because, of the domestic commerce afforded and its own special products will keep pace with the progress of improvement in the interior.
Niles' Register.

Hillsborough, April 25.

The Season.—Accounts from various quarters unite in representing the present spring as remarkable for its mildness; vegetation is much earlier than usual, and appearances indicate that the present will be an uncommonly fruitful season throughout the union. With us, with regard to the fruit trees, there have been "seven years of dearth;" for during that period the fruit has been more or less destroyed by the frost; last year, in this neighbourhood, the peach trees entirely failed. The present season, however, we are, as in other sections of the union, promised fruit in abundance; the frost, so far, having produced no injury and the trees appear to have been made more prolific by the failures of the previous years. But the husbandman, this year, has more to cheer him than the prospect of an abundance of fruit; the beneficence of Providence appears also in his fields, and there too, is promised a plentiful increase. For the two days past copious and fruitful showers have interrupted the long continued dryness of the season, and the industrious farmer can see nothing in prospect to mar his work; a rich harvest promises to rejoice his heart and call forth his gratitude.—Recorder.

The "North American Medical and Surgical Journal," for the present Month, contains an article, entitled, "Remarks upon the mischievous effects on Society of Spirituous Liquors, and the means of preventing them. By Samuel Emlen, M. D. one of the physicians of the Pennsylvania Hospital, &c. This interesting article is concluded with the subsequent notes:—

To exhibit, in one point of view, the influence of ardent spirits amongst the poor in philadelphia alone, and we believe it is quite equalled in the cities of other states, and in some excelled, we will here make a statement of the number of paupers received in our poor-house, or alms-house, during the last five years; nearly all of whom, it is well known, are reduced to poverty, and obliged to seek this asylum, from habitual intemperance, either practised by themselves, or those who should support them at home. We will also state the quantity and the cost of the spirituous and other liquors used in the house during the same period; which will show what an expense the public incur, merely in what is thought to be the necessary stimulation of these poor inmates, to keep them alive, without counting any other cost.

From the 22d of May, 1821, to the 22d of May, 1826, there were admitted in the Philadelphia Alms-house, 65,065 paupers, making an average of 13,013 received in each year; of the whole number admitted in the five years, 28,435 were men, 29,041 women, and 7,589 children. During the same period, the managers, in their annual account, state, there were used in the medical and surgical wards, 3,993 gallons of ardent spirits, besides wine, porter, ale, and cider, the cost of the whole of which is set down at 8,882 dollars and 57 cents.

Now, if spirituous liquors had not been accessible, "that bane of human nature, and most pernicious discovery ever made by art," as it is emphatically styled by the present Professor Home of Edinburgh, how different would have been the situation of most of these poor, unhappy dependants! How different too, the demands upon public bounty! Society has long mourned over this cause of depravity; it is time to do more.

It is stated of Sir Walter Raleigh, that he entrusted Ben Johnson with the education of his eldest son. Johnson was a severe master and his pupil determined by means of his vices to free himself from his tyranny. Sir Walter had an utter abhorrence of drunkenness, a sin to which Johnson had no great aversion. One day, when he was intoxicated, young Raleigh sent him in a large basket, to his father, and the porters informed the knight that their young master had sent home his tutor! The following is an extract from Sir Walter's instructions to his son and to posterity.—Bal. Reg.

"Take especial care that thou delightest not in wine, for there never was any man that came to honour or preferment that loved it; for it transformeth a man into a beast, decayeth health, poisoneth the breath, destroyeth natural heat, deformeth the face, rotteth the teeth, and to conclude, maketh a man contemptible, soon old, and despised of all wise and worthy men, hated in thy servants, in thyself and companions; for it is a bewitching and infectious vice. And, remember my words, that it were better for a man to be subject to any vice than to it; for all other vanities and sins are recovered, but a drunkard will never shake off the delight of beastliness; for the longer it possesseth a man, the more he shall be subject to it; for it dulleth the spirits, and destroyeth the body, as ivy doth the old tree, or as the worm that engendereth in the kernel of the nut."

We understand, says our Boston Correspondent, that the two British brigs which arrived on Monday from Bermuda, with American property, not departing after being ordered away, have been siezed. It is a peculiar case. They may possibly be released on bonds to secure against the result of a trial and final decision.—N. Y. M. Adv.

Anecdote.—A gentleman who has been attending the Court during the week told us the following saying of Jacob Barker, which occured at the close of his last libel case:—On the verdict of guilty being brought out against him, Jacob is stated to have said—"If I were indicted for murdering Morgan, I do believe a jury would find me guilty."
Nat. Adv.

The following specimen of refined and ludicrous humanity, is taken from Doctor Kitchiner's Cook's Oracle:

"The true lover of an Oyster will have some regard to the feeling of his little favorite, and will never abandon it to the mercy of a bungling operator, but will open it himself, and contrive to detach the fish from the shell so dexterously that the oyster is hardly conscious he has been ejected from his lodgings, till he feels the teeth of the pisciverous gourmand tickling him to death."

Not long since a man applied to Dr. Mitchell of New York for the loan of a dollar, stating that he was in the most pressing want. The Doctor did not know him, yet he gave him the money, telling the borrower that he never expected to hear from him again. But some time after, the man met the doctor in the street and offered to pay him, handing him a three dollar bill; the doctor gave him $2 in change and applauded him highly,—but in a few minutes after, the doctor offered his three dollar bill at the post office, and lo! it was counterfeit. Provoked at the baseness of the rascal, the doctor got the track of him and had him seized. He proved to be well known at the police office as an old rogue.

Paris, March 1.

Letters from Prussia say, that Prince Puckler Muskan, who was married to the daughter of the late Prince Hardenburg, has divorced her, to marry the widow of King Christopher, a negress of Hayti, who is still young, if we may believe the German Correspondent.

EXECUTION OF A MUTINEER.

[From the Noctes Ambrosianæ of Blackwood.]

Shepherd.—But ance—it's a lang time syne—I saw a sodger shot—dead, sir, as a door-nail, or a coffin-nail, or ony ither kind o' nail. What a crowd on the Links that day! But a' wi' fixed whitish faces—nae speakin'—no sae muckle as a whisper—a frozen dumbness that nae wecht could break! Then the airmy appeared in the distance; for there were three hail regiments, a' wi' fixed beggonets; but no music—nae music for a while at least, till a' at ance, mercy on us! we heard, like laigh sullen thunder, the soun' o' the great muffled drum, aye played on, ye ken, by a black man; in this case, an African nee'rger, sax feet four; and what bangs he gied the bass—the whites o' his een rowin' about as if he was glad, atween every stroke! The tread of the troops was like the step o' ae giant—sae perfate was their discippleen—and afore I weel kent that they were a' in the Links, three sides o' a square were formed—and the soun' of the great drum ceased, as at an inaudible word of command, or wavin' o' a haun, or the lowerin' o' a banner. It was but ae man that was about to die—but for that ae man, had their awe no hindered them, twenty thousan' folk wad at that moment hae broken out into lamentations and rueful cries—but as yet not a tear was shed—not a sigh was heaved—for had a' that vast crowd been sae mony images, or corpses raised up by cantrip in their death-claes, they couldna hae been mair motionless than at that minute, nor mair speechless than that multitude o' leevin' souls! There, a' at ance, hoo or whare he cam frae nane could tell, there I say, a' at ance stood the Mutineer. Some tell't me afterwards that they had seen him marchin' along, twa or three yards ahint his coffin, wi' his head just a wee thocht inclined downwards, not in fear o' man or death, but in awe o' God and judgment, keepin' time wi' a military step that was natural to him, and no unbecoming a brave man on the way to the grave, and his een fixed on the green that was fadin' awa for ever and ever frae aneath his feet; but that was a sicht I saw not—for the first time I beheld him he was standin', a' unlike the ither men, in the middle o' that three-sided square, and there was a shudder through the hail multitude, just as if we had been a' standin' haun in haun, and a natural philosopher had gien us a shock o' his electrical machine. "That's him—that's him—puir, puir fallow!—Oh! but he's a pretty man!"—Such were the ejaculations frae thousan's of women, maist o' them young anes, but some o' them auld, and gray-headed aneath their mutches, and no a few wi' babies sookin' or caterwailin' at their breasts. His name was Lewis Mackenzie—and as fine a young man he was as ever stepped on heather. The moment before he knelt down on his coffin, he seemed as fu' o' life as if he had stripped aff his jacket for a game at foot-ba', or to fling the hammer. Ay, weel micht the women-folk gaze on him wi' red weeping een, for he had loed them but ower weel, and mony a time, it is said, had he let himself down the Castle-rock at night, God knows hoo, to meet his lemans—but a' that, a' his sins, and a' his crimes, acted or only meditated, were at an end noo—puir fallow—and the platoon, wi' fixed beggonets, were drawn up within ten yards, or less, o' where he stood, and he himsel having tied a handkerchief ower his een, dropped down on his knees on his coffin, wi' faulded hands, and lips movin' fast, fast, and white as ashes, in prayer!

North.—Cursed be the inexorable justice of military law! he might have been pardoned.

Shepherd.—Pardoned! Hadna he disarmed his ain captain o' his sword, and ran him through the shouther—in a mutiny of which he was himsel the ringleader?—King George on the throne durstna hae pardoned him—it would hae been as much as his crown was worth—for hoo could King, Kintra, and Constitution thole a standing army, in which mutiny was not punished wi' death?

North.—Six balls pierced him—through head and heart—and what a shriek, James, then arose!

Shepherd.—Aye, to hae heard that shriek, you wad hae thought that the women that raised it wad never hae lauched again; but in a few hours, as sune as night-fall darkened the city, some o' them were gossipin' about the shootin' o' the sodger to their neighbours, some dancin' at hops that shall be nameless, some sitting on their sweethearts' knees wi' their arms roun' their necks, some swearin' like troopers, some doubtless sitting thochtfu' by the fireside, or awa' to bed in sadness an hour sooner than usual, and then fast asleep.

North.—I saw his old father, James, with my own eyes, step out from the crowd, and way being made for him, he walked up to his son's dead body, and embracing it, kissed his bloody head, and then with clasped hands, looked up to heaven.

Shepherd.—A strang and stately auld man, and ane too that had been a soldier in his youth. Sorrow, not shame, somewhat bowed his head, and ance he reel'd as if he were faint on a sudden—But what the deev l's the use o' me haverin' awa' this way about the shootin' o' a sodger thretty years sin syne, and mair too—for didna I see that auld silvery-headed father o' the mutineer staggering alang the Grass Market, the verra next day after the execution, as fou' as the Baltic, wi' a heap o' mischievous weans holloin' after him, and him a' the while in a dwam o' drink and despair, maunderin' about his son Lewis, then lvin' a' barken'd wi' blood in his coffin, six feet deep, in a fine rich loam.

North.—The very same afternoon, I heard the drums and fifes of a recruiting party, belonging to the same regiment, winding away down towards Holyrood: and the place of Lewis Mackenzie, in the line of bold sergeants with their claymores, was supplied by a corporal, promoted to a triple bar on his sleeve, in consequence of the death of the mutineer.

Shepherd.—It was an aufu' scene yon, sir; but there was naething humiliating to human nature in it—as in a hangin'; and it struck a wholesome fear into the souls o' many thousan' sodgers.

Commerci at the Battle of Hersan.—This young prince of the House of Lorraine, was inexpressibly brave. On this occasion he headed the volunteers. Observing that a cornet of his regiment had lost his colours in the skirmish previous to the general engagement, he requested permission of the Duke of Lorraine to take another from the enemy. The duke yielded to his entreaties. Commerci perceiving a Turkish ensign carrying a small standard at the end of a javelin, ran up to him, and when very near fired his pistol at him. Having missed his aim he threw away his pistol and drew his sword. The Turk seized this opportunity to plunge the javelin into his side, and as he was endeavouring to draw it out again, the prince seized the weapon with his left hand, and with his right cleft the Turkish officer's head. He then pulled out the javelin, carried the standard, stained with his blood, to the duke of Lorraine, and sent for his cornet, whom he thus addressed: "There, sir, is a standard, which I intrust you with; it has cost me rather dear, and you will do me the favour to take better care of it than of that which you suffered to be taken from you." This singular reprimand was almost as much admired as the action itself. Commerci recovered of his wound; and the emperor, Leopold the First, being made acquainted with the circumstances of this achievement, wished to see the Turkish standard. It was of red taffeta, with a crescent embroidered with gold in the middle. The monarch ordered it to be preserved in a church, and the empress with her own hands made another pair of colours, and sent it to the prince, in the place of that which his company had lost.—Memoirs of Prince Eugene of Savoy, Note to.—Autobiography.

From Buckingham's Travels.

Love in Turcomania.—"The women of the Turcomans, who are in general fair, ruddy, and handsome, neither disfigure themselves by blue stains, nor veil themselves, after the manner of Arabs. The jealousy of the men, regarding their honor, is, however, still stronger. Mr. Maseyk, who, it should be added is a Dutch merchant of the highest respectability, and has resided at Aleppo for forty years, and made journeys through every part of the surrounding country, told me an instance in proof of this, which I should scarcely have believed, if I had not heard it from his own mouth.

"Two young persons of the same tribe loved each other, and were betrothed in marriage; their passion was open and avowed, and known to all their friends, who had consented to their union, and even fixed the period for its celebration. It happened, one evening, that they met, accidentally, alone, but in sight of the tents; they stopped a moment to speak to each other, and were on the point of passing on, when the brothers of the girl perceiving it, rushed out, with arms in their hands, to avenge their disgrace. The young man took to flight, and escaped with a musket wound; but the poor girl received five balls in her body, besides being mangled by the daggers of her own brothers, who had aimed to plunge them in her heart; and when she fell, they abandoned her carcase to the dogs!

"The young man gained the tent of a powerful friend, the chief of another tribe encamped near them, and told his story; begging that he would assist him with a troop of horse, to enable him to rescue the body of his love from its present degradation. He went accompanied by some of his own people, and found life still remaining. He then repaired to the tent of her enraged brothers, and asked them why they had done this? They replied that they could not suffer their sister to survive the loss of her honour which had been stained by her stopping to talk with her intended husband, on the public road, before her marriage. The lover demanded her body for burial; when her brothers, suspecting the motive, exclaimed, "What, is she not yet lifeless?—then we will finish this work of death;" and were rushing out to execute their purpose, when the youth caused the troop of horsemen, sent to aid his purpose, to appear, and threatened instant death to him who should first stir to interrupt his design. The young girl was conveyed to his tent, and after a series of kind attentions, slowly recovered.

"During her illness the distracted lover, now expelled from his own tribe, came, under cover of the night, to see her; and, weeping over her wounds, continually regretted that he had been so base as to seek his safety in flight, and not to have died in defending her. She as heroically replied, 'No! No! It is my highest happiness that I have suffered, and that you have escaped; we shall both live, and Heaven will yet bless us with many pledges of our lasting love.' This really happened; the girl recovered, was married to her impassioned swain, and they are still both alive, with a numerous family of children.

"So romantic a tale of love, jealousy, revenge, fidelity, and heroism, would have been incredible, were it not that all the parties were known to Mr. Maseyk, who related it; that he did so in the presence of many other persons born in Aleppo, and acquainted by report with the fact; and that the veracity of the narrator may be regarded as unquestionable."

Believe nothing against another but upon good authority; nor report what may hurt another, unless it be greater hurt to others to conceal it.

Hayti—From late accounts, would seem to be fast returning to her ancient state of vassalage under the French government. Emissaries of the French are insinuating themselves into the notice and favor of the colored authorities of the island, and, in prosecuting their designs, leave no means untried to prejudice and embitter their minds against all the friends of liberty, especially the American residents, who receive the greater portion of their disguised abuse. In these designs they have so far succeeded that a paper entitled the Journal du Commerce, has been established at Port au Prince, under the auspices of Boyer, and edited by a Frenchman named Grouvel. —This Journal seizes upon every occasion to injure the American citizens residing there, by the foulest misrepresentation and calumnies, conveyed in a manner so insidious as to operate with double effect. Boyer himself is fully in the interest of Charles X. and is willing to sacrifice the liberties of his people for the sake of confirming the despotism which he is trying to establish. No slander, circulated by this newly begotten journal, has a chance of refutation, because the mouths of all are stopped. Commerce and trade are deploraby reduced under the baleful operation of this new French influence.

The restrictions on the Colonial Trade have recently operated upon several British vessels which have entered our ports. The British ship Arabian from Barbadoes, was ordered off from Carleston, on the 15th inst. —Two British brigs which arrived on Monday week at Boston, from Bermuda, with American property, were ordered off; but not obeying the mandate of the Collector, were seized. It is said that they may be released on giving bond to secure against the result of a trial, and a final decision. On Saturday last, the English ship Killingbuck arrived at Alexandria from Antigua, with a cargo of molasses, rum and wine, and several passengers—the Collector ordered them to depart in twenty-four hours—yet on application to the President, the passengers were permitted to land with their baggage; but no part of the cargo, though the property of resident merchants—and the vessel was compelled to sail within the prescribed time, for some port beyond the limits of the U. States.—Rich. Enquirer.

We learn that Mr. Cooper's new Novel, the Prairie, will be published in about a fortnight. At the date of the latest intelligence from the author, he was still in Paris, attending to the publication of that work, of which five editions are in the press, one in England, two in Paris, in French and English, one in Berlin, and one in this country; all of them are to appear simultaneously.—Phil. paper.

Murder.—On Thursday night, Capt. Allen, of the Schr. Morning Star, lying near Blakely and bound to Havana, was murdered by the cook, a free negro. As we have heard the story, the crew were all in the long boat at the time the murder was committed, carrying out the kedge, and no body left on board but Captain Allen and the cook. Whether they were in dispute we did not hear, but the cook knocked the captain down with a hatchet, and cut him in a shocking manner before the crew could come to his relief. The cook, after the murder, got possession of the arms, and, with a gun, kept off the crew until morning. In the mean time they went ashore, procured arms, and in the morning took him, after firing several shots, and secured him in jail.

Common Carriers.—It is stated in the Cleaveland (New York) Herald, that a Mr. Holmes has recovered against the Lake Erie Steam Boat Company, $455, in the Ohio Courts, for the loss of a trunk originally delivered, with other property, to the master of the Superior, for conveyance to Cleaveland. It seems that the trunk was left on board when Holmes was landed, and passed through several hands before he again obtained it. During the time it was out of his possession, it was robbed of about $400 in money, besides wearing apparel. The Company was made liable as common carriers, and under a special agreement to deliver the property in safety.

The following note was found among the papers of the late lord Erskine:

To General Washington.

SIR: I have taken the liberty to introduce your august and immortal name in a short sentence, which is to be found in the book I send to you.

I have a large acquaintance among the most valuable and exalted classes of men, but you are the only human being for whom I ever felt an awful reverence.

I sincerely pray God to grant a long and serene evening to a life so gloriously devoted to the universal happiness of the world.

High Life.—The Sunday Times says it is rumored in the Court circles that a disagreement, not likely to be reconciled, has occurred between two most exalted personages in Ireland, who, since their marriage, were distinguished for connubial happiness. This exalted lady possessed every requisite to confer happiness, having intellectual attainments and wealth. Certain it is that she has left Ireland, and rumor alleges that she will retrace her steps to a more distant land. It is said that the cause of disagreement was the intrusion into domestic arrangements of some near relatives to the noble Lord.

Can this lady be the Marchioness of Wellesley, late Mrs. Patterson, of Baltimore? "Retracing her steps to a more distant land" looks like it. Happiness is not always the fruits of rank and wealth.—N. Y. Enquirer.

Sagacity of Irish Potatoes—"Did you ever hear the old fable of Jack Finnane, and the white eyes?" said Sandy. "To be sure, I didn't; for what should I?" "Sit aisy then, and I'll tell you it. This Mr. John Finnane, you see, was a kind of half-sir, a middleman, that used to be a great long ago, letting out land in acres, and half acres, and quarter-acres, to the poor people, that would, may be, want a gival (armful) of praties, coming on the idle season; and a hard and a bitter landlord he was, to the poor fellows that wouldn't have the rent agen the gale day; and good care he took, I'll be bound, that not a single cannop (potatoe) ever left the airth until every camack [penny token] was paid, dead gale and all.—Signs on, it often chanced, as most like it was, that the poor tenants not having the defference o' the rint, used to go into the pratie fields at night, pulling up the stalks, and filling their little Jack Daws [John Doe, a small bag] with what God sent up with the roots, which being made known to John Finnane, you see, he sat up a night, to know would he catch any of the plunderers at their doings, which they having notice of, did'nt come—as why should they? being marked for the quarter sessions, surely. Well! 'twas coming on midnight, and Mr. Finnane being, as it were, tired with himself, sat down on a ridge of the praties, with his feet in the furrough, and he very sleepy, it being Jerry Graham's quarter. 'Tis aisily known, he opened his eyes wide enough, whin he heard—what do you think? only Jerry's white eyes talking to one another, in the ground under him! He stooped his head down, and began to hearken. "Will you grow any more?" says a little pratie to a big one. "No a gra gal," says the big pratie: "it's big enough I am already." Well then, says the other, "move out o' the way with you a piece, and let us grow for Jerry Graham and the craturs." "I'd be happy to oblige you then," says the big pratie; "but sure it's well you know none of us can stir from our places an inch, until John Finnane gets his rint."

We have received notes and letters enough to fill a mail bag on the subject of multiplying 500 cents by 500 cents, and most of these letters contain sarcasms and sneers against the opinion given by Charles King on the subject. The fact is, Charles is perfectly right, and as it is very seldom he is right we give him "his due." Cents cannot be multiplied by cents. You might as well multiply 5 coats by 6 pair of breeches, or $18,000 by 2 gold snuff boxes.

POTTER'S Vegetable Catholicon.

THE proprietor of this invaluable medicine, feels authorized by its increasing reputation, to recommend it as superior to all other popular remedies, for the cure of King's Evil or Scrofula, Necrosis or diseased bones, Syphilis in every stage, Mercurial disease, Rheumatism, Liver complaints, and Ulcers of every description.

The Catholicon has also been used with great success in every variety of Cutaneous disease, blotches on the face, pimples and tetter in particular: White Swellings, Gout, Jaundice and Bilious diseases generally, Dyspepsia or Indigestion, complaints of the Stomach, and general debility. It is a certain purifier of the blood and humours, and has been found an efficacious remedy in purifying the blood of children after vaccination, and should be invariably used as a general alternative both for children and adults, being agreeable to the most delicate palate; and a grateful cordial to the stomach. This is the first discovery of a medicine taken into the stomach, that has had the long desired effect, of curing the most obstinate and distressing external diseases. The use of nutritious food, and the ordinary avocations of business are not interrupted by the Catholicon; and its properties having the power of restoring both flesh and bone, and of renovating and invigorating every part of the system during the process of exterminating disease, is without a parallel.

PORT OF WILMINGTON.

ARRIVED,

Brig Sarah, McKown, New York.
Schr. Hiram, Paddock, Philadelphia.
Schr. Eliza Ann, Sloman, New York.
Schr. Regulator, Eaton, Charleston.
Sloop Nancy, Gibbs, Elizabeth City.

CLEARED,

Brig Cornelia, Drinkwater, St. Thomas.

Charleston, April 30.

The report received at New York of Com. Porter having lost a brig by capture is incorrect. Captain Anderson, of the sloop Superior, arrived here yesterday from Key West, left at that place a portion of the Commodore's squadron, and relates nothing concerning the capture of any of his force. The statement that the first officer of the Com. was carried a prisoner to Havana is correct. His name is Thompson. He had taken a coaster, and was making for Key West, when he was pursued, and was compelled to run his prize vessel ashore. With five of his own men and fifteen prisoners, he got into the long boat, when the prisoners overpowered and took him.

Ohio Wine.—Thirty barrels of wine have been made from the grapes of the country, by a farmer near Dayton, Ohio, and one near Germantown made 100 barrels. Cultivation would doubtless improve our native grapes. The market price of the wine is $15 per barrel.—Censor.

The Statue of Washington, by Chantry, for the city of Boston, is received at that place by the ship London Packet, from London.

Generosity.—One great reason why men practise generosity so little in the world, is their finding so little there; generosity is catching; and if so many men escape it, it is in a great degree from the same reason that countrymen escape the small pox, because they meet with none to give it them.—Maxims, Characters, &c.

POETRY.

From the Richmond Enquirer.

MONTICELLO.

When Spring unfolds her many colour'd robe,
And gems its glowing tints with crystal dews,
I love to wander through thy silent groves,
Sweet Monticello. Loveliest in the hour
Of vernal freshness; when the balmy air
Distils rich fragrance from each bursting germ.
I see thee in unequalled beauty now,
As, rising from dark winter's sable pall,
Thou smilest sweetly in thy loneliness;
The distant mountain's undulating line
Waves through the blue horizon; lost at length
To the dim vision, in the misty air.
While the near summits, darkly frowning still
In wintry barrenness, disturb the eye
Sent forth in search of beauty. Still I love
To gaze upon the scene, tho' all is mute.
Hush'd are the sounds of childhood's mirthful voice
And youth's glad laugh; that wake the echoing hills.
Oh! can it really be, that one brief year
Suffices thus far desolation's work'
Time has o'erleaped its once appointed bounds,
And like a shoreless torrent swept away
The treasured hopes and joys of many years.
Where now is that loved form, so often seen
In morning's dewy hour, when flow'rs unfold
Their many tinted petals to the sun'
Gently she moved, in Matron dignity
Among the sweets her fostering hand had spread.
Her infant prattlers sporting at her feet,
While often she restrain'd their noisy glee;
For, at her side, with the deliberate steps
Of tranquil age, her Patriot Father moved.
Where rests he now? Columbia's cherish'd son!
Whose wisdom fram'd the charter of her rights
And help'd to spurn the Lion from her path!
Who gave his life, thro' long protracted years
To unremitting patriotic toils.
Where rests he now? Beneath yon lowly tomb
His consecrated relics sleep in dust.
But History's voice will blazen forth his fame,
And each recorded virtue will appear
Thro' the long track of Time's unwearied course.
For her, whose Virtues emulated his
In life's domestic scenes; whose graces shone
Conspicuous to the hearts of those she lov'd;
For her, no peaceful haven is reserved
Through age's gathering cloud, or sorrows storm.
That country, boastful of the patriot's worth,
Has found him but a grave. While for his child,
For whom his closing lips besought their aid,
No home is left within her native land.
Quench'd is the blazing hearth! Silent the halls
Where social intercourse enlarged the heart.
Each cherish'd relic of enlighten'd taste
Once hoarded by his hand, is scatter'd now.
The lonely spider spreads her lengthen'd web,
Unheeded, thro' the tenantless abode.
The very air breathes mournfully, as if
The voice of nature would a requiem sing
O'er banish'd worth, and Virtue unrepaid
Her arduous toils. Here science found a heme
Beneath the sage's eye? His waning lamp
Shed its last beams upon her rising face,
But all is now, forgotten in the grave,
Or, if remembered, only to express
The heartless sympathy of barren words.
Some few proclaim the patriotic deeds
Of him who slumbers in the silent tomb;
While others shun the theme, as if it moved
The soul too rudely from its selfish calm!

$200 Reward!

Stop the Thieves and runaway Mulattoes.

WHEREAS, sometime ago, Jemima Armwood, a free mulatto woman, for the sum of $200, (to enable her to purchase her husband, named Richard, or commonly called Dick Youngblood, well known in Barnwell District, So. Ca.) bound three of her Girls, named Becky, about 17 years old, Teena, about 14, and Darcas, about 12, to me, to serve as indented servants, and on Thursday, the 8th instant, they inveigled them from my service and removed to parts unknown, taking with them my three servants; they besides committed several acts of swindling, theft, outrages, and other rogueries, to myself and others, — such as stealing my sulkey and harness, and selling them in Hamburg, S. C., on the 7th inst.; and on the 8th, assaulting and beating a white man, a respectable old gentleman; and many other villainies too numerous to be here inserted.

A reward of $200 dollars will be paid for apprehending the said Jemima, her husband Dick, Becky Teena, and Darcas, and deliver them to me, or in the Augusta Jail. They have besides five smaller children, one a sucking baby, and may probably have their son, named Daniel, about 22 years of age, all mulattoes, 10 or 11 in number. They started with a cart and a white blind mare; the cart is an uncommon one, it has a very large new body nailed to the shafts, the wheels are from an old gig, originally painted green, but dirty—the axletree of the cart is wood, and the ends that goes in the wheels are iron. Dick is short, about 40 or 50 years of age, illiterate but keen, artful, and well acquainted with the world—most any subject can furnish him with grounds on which to build plausible stories, to secure in his favor the sympathy of others; (and girls are known to be prolific subjects.) Therefore, in order, if possible to counteract his cunning, and as I am not known at a distance, let it be known that I am a married man, with wife and seven small children, the oldest only ten years old. I employed the three girls in nursing my small children, and to no other work, and never whipped them; but Dick gave Teena a most unmerciful whipping on the 8th instant, for not robbing me according to his directions, and may probably place that whipping too, to my credit, in order to enlist the feelings of others in his favor.—They have been traced to Fayetteville, N. C., and arrived there between the 18th and 26th February.

Fayetteville Academy.

THE Committee to whom is confided the care to this Institution, have resolved to let out the buildings to some competent and efficient Teacher, who will take upon himself the entire management of the Academy on his own account.

The buildings are large and commodious, and calculated both for a Male and Female Department.

The Children of the town are numerous:—the local advantages for a flourishing Academy are great, and well calculated to invite pupils from abroad:—and, as there is now no private Grammar School in the place, the present appears to be a favorable time for an individual to embark in the conduct of the Seminary on his own responsibility. It is believed that the profits of the Institution thus managed would reward the undertaker amply for his labor and enterprise.

Any person wishing the situation will apply by letter (post paid) to the Subscriber, without delay.

H. POTTER, Pres't of the Committee.

Fayetteville, Dec. 6, 1826—97-tf

☞ The Committee are desirous to give the use of the Buildings to some person or persons who will keep up a temporary School, until the Academy shall be put upon a permanent footing. Application as above.
